

WHY I AM NOT ATTRACTED TO CLAVICULAR

Don't be mistaken in the same way women are, when they say to an Incel, "Why should I care about your opinion? You are not attractive to me!" We know this is a mistake, because both Incels and Chads are attracted to the same things in women: femininity. Similarly, a Femcel and a Stacy are attracted to the same thing in a man: masculinity. A difference between Incels and Chads, is with how they express their sexuality. An Incel may consume images of AI generated women, surgically enhanced pornstars, and exaggerated anime women with huge tits, a tiny waist, and big, curved hips. Chad doesn't need to consume this media because he gets laid, but both Incel and Chad find these exact things attractive. Likewise, a Femcel may read highly disagreeable goyslop about an 8 foot tall werewolf with an 8 inch penis, but if such a werewolf were to exist in real life, Stacy would be seeking him out as well. Regardless if you consider me to be closer to the Femcel or Stacy side of the spectrum, my opinion on whether I find Clavicular attractive is relevant, because I am a woman, as is every Femcel or Stacy.

Women are fundamentally attracted to 2 things in a man, which, together, socially comprise "masculinity":

- 1) Strength
- 2) Goodness

I cannot speak to the second, because I don't know Clavicular. I can, however, speak to the first, because I have observed plenty of his behavior online. Strength in a man is the more important of the two traits, because no man is good without being strong, merely harmless. Because strength is required for goodness, women who know they cannot capture a man with both characteristics, will settle for strength first. This is why women fall in love with criminals who use and abuse them. When that inevitably doesn't work out, they settle for goodness second. Hence, beta bucks.

I'm here to make the argument that Clavicular is a LOT closer to "beta bucks" than "alpha fucks", despite what he'd rather have you believe.

1) CLAVICULAR CARES TOO MUCH ABOUT WHAT OTHER PEOPLE THINK OF HIM.

When speaking with Nick Fuentes on stream, Clavicular provides this example of normies in the elevator smiling at him, instead of having micro-expressions of disdain, the latter of which, over time, Clavicular implies can ruin your life because people being subtly mean to you your entire life puts a damper on your mood. This view is understandable, but does not come from a place of strength. Growing up, I have consistently observed women ask or wonder if I liked them or not. I always thought to myself "Who cares if I like you?", but actually, this is completely normal behavior for women. Nick Fuentes properly responds to Clavicular, saying that he never thought of it that way, and that he simply doesn't care if people like him or not. THAT is how a mentally healthy man thinks of the matter. At least women have a decent reason for caring so much about whether or not people like them: women brutalize each other socially, even your own mother and sisters. Why? Women are a standard deviation higher in neuroticism than men are, because of the primordial infant that exists inside all of us women. We must maintain social cohesion at all costs, instinctively speaking, so that infant stays safe. And how else are you supposed to be not only pregnant with Chad's infant, but to possibly gain his investment, if you don't squash your competition into never trying again at all? Non-conformist women who threaten a normie woman's mating strategy either by being very attractive, or by being unattractive but still successful, must be brutalized into submission. Female bullying serves these two purposes, so it makes biological sense that women care so much about what other people think of them. Clavicular, on the other hand, does not have such great reasons for caring so much. He is a damaged man. I can tell, not in an insulting way, that he got bullied or ignored in the past. And, looking into his past, my suspicions were confirmed.

2) HE SURROUNDS HIMSELF WITH LOW-QUALITY WOMEN, PUTTING UP WITH THEIR BEHAVIOR SO HE CAN FUCK THEM.

Why surround yourself with people you don't like, who exhibit low IQ, solipsistic behavior, just to obtain something you can easily get through other means? Being a monkey on dating apps and on live streams for random poon is far lower than just paying a prostitute and getting it over with. But, through these methods, Clavicular does manage to attract women. How does he even attract these whores in the first place, with no intelligent woman ever seen with Clavicular? I'm putting aside the selection bias of living in Miami, for which I give Clavicular my dearest condolences. Clavicular has optimized his entire persona to attract whores. While good women also like visually attractive men, they don't go after or choose men with their "hotness" first thing in mind. Yes, obviously, in order to be in a relationship with any woman who will actually have sex with you enthusiastically, you need to pass a threshold of attractiveness. Clavicular is far past that point, and has made his attractiveness THE defining thing about him. Is it no wonder then, that he attracts shallow whores who choose him just for his looks? He is known only for sexual attractiveness, just as a whore is. Like attracts like.

But doesn't this contradict what I said earlier, about women finding strength to be the most attractive? Well, Clavicular's beauty gives off physical markers of strength, so that actually tracks. Not only that, but these broads are on birth control, so their sexuality is skewed in the direction of liking feminine men. And secondly, no, because his beauty gives him status, which IS strength to women. To return to the title of this video, I don't care about status, so I don't have it in me to clamor around Clav for this reason. A statistical exception for women, I know, but I'd rather date Diogenes in the barrel than put up with Clavicular. What I prefer instead of status, is masculine-feminine polarity. Which I can engage with due to not being on birth control. This leads me to my third point.

3) CLAVICULAR IS NOT VERY MASCULINE.

Yes, he has a lot of the physical markers of masculinity, but so does a wax statue. I'm not attracted to wax statues. Think about why women love artist, edgy, unique men. Womens' lives are boring, so they want to join a man's world, not comprise his world. This is why women hate "nice guys" who text them too often. Obviously, Clavicular is the opposite of this. He's not obsessively texting the same women, he's obsessively looking in the mirror. From what he has said about himself, the entirety of his internal, intellectual world is subsumed by thinking about how he could improve his appearance further, and how he could improve his status. No sane, intelligent woman wants to join that world.

Dear Clavicular: What's the point of physically becoming a Chad, if you're just going to be a mentalcel anyways?

Secondly, Clavicular is already past the threshold of attractiveness needed to accomplish any real goal he wants. Because he is obsessed with looksmaxxing, he could have put in 20% of the effort he has put in up until this point, and gained 80% of the results. Clav doesn't understand the concept of satisficing.

Satisficing is the concept of choosing what is "good enough" for decisions that don't really matter. If I want a lipstick, I'll go into a store, choose the shade that looks best on me, test the appearance of that lipstick on my face by going outside in natural lighting and seeing it in that context, and purchase only that one. If Clavicular were a woman, he'd be researching every single lipstick brand, watching influencer videos non stop, and looking up lipstick reviews on Reddit. For months straight. Obviously, there is a huge opportunity cost to being a retard with your time, but Clavicular thinks it's worth it. Not just for looks and status, which are his immediate goals, but because status and looks are the means to reach his arguably transhumanist ideal. He wants to go all in, maxxng out this one stat, just to see how far he can take it, and become one with the technology he uses to do so, with him being unable to go camping because he'd have to transport at least 600 dollars worth of drugs to maintain his appearance, all because he enjoys this obsession. His obsessive quest for self-improvement would be highly respectable, but it is not, because....

4) THE PHILOSOPHICAL GROUNDWORK AND METHODOLOGY FOR CLAVICULAR'S LOOKSMAXXING IS DOGSHIT.

Transcending the limits of the human form, like imperfection, and why this is no end goal to strive for.

I could make the aesthete argument that imperfection is required for beauty, which clearly does have merit, easily seen if you read literature or consume art. Which Clavicular obviously does not, so I'm not here to make that argument since this video is mainly addressed to him and his audience.

Clavicular's ideal is transhumanist in nature because he is trying to get rid of an essential aspect of human nature: physical imperfection. Banishing all physical imperfection isn't just impossible. It's a waste of your only life.

If you have a higher, non-human, ideal, you can't rely on your own perception, or the perception of others, as a yardstick for your level of accomplishment, because a higher (beyond human) ideal necessarily requires objective, or beyond human assessment, to see if you're getting closer to that ideal. That ideal of perfection is above all of us. Yes, obviously certain facial ratios and proportions look better than others. Imagine you are an 8/10, the tail end of the bell curve, and you STILL think there's tons left to do, in the same striving mindset for huge yields in improvement as when you were a 5/10. That's your own self-perception failing you. This transhumanist ideal requires the constant striving toward a superhuman goal, constant leveling up, which is simply not feasible, even with technological progress. You can't really do anything to improve your appearance much if you're an 8/10. The improvements in appearance become more and more small as you continue onward, like an asymptote. Getting closer and closer to that line, but NEVER being able to reach it. Not only that, but you can't inch toward that line forever. People get old, drugs have side effects, botox and filler have side effects, you could become disabled or ill at any moment, and you will die at some point. Human goals, not inhuman, impossible ones, benefit you far more. You can't actually discern if you're closer to being the "perfect man", but you CAN tell if you look better aesthetically than you did previously as long as you don't get too in your own head about it. We need to be competing with ourselves, imagining a healthier, kinder, more productive, version, and asking what he/she would do, instead of grasping for something that will never exist and trying to fit under that mold, that we can't even objectively determine.

Noob gains don't last forever, but to get the dopamine hit required to sustain this constant "leveling up", "ascending", mentality, you have to pretend they do. Let's be realistic guys, Clavicular isn't going to become that much better looking from this point onward, even with double jaw surgery. He already has a well-developed maxilla and mandible. The 1mm advancement to bring him to the ideal ratio isn't going to do much. And the limb-lengthening surgery of 4 inches would actually fuck up his proportions, since his femur would be too long and awkward looking, and it would ruin him since he's already 8 heads tall. Seriously, take it from an artist, Clav. You already have nearly ideal proportions.

It's not going to get better than this. Clavicular is not going to "ascend" any further. He can already pose like the white version of Jeremy Meeks.

Ever hear of the phrase "think lightly of yourself, and deeply of the world?" It's actually good advice. Thinking about yourself in repetitive thought loops, as is necessary to do what Clavicular has been doing, is not only pathetic and a waste of time, but genuinely detrimental to your morale. Constant improvement of your facial features, requires constant reassessment of them.

Secondly, Clavicular is looksmaxxing WRONG. If I wanted to improve my appearance, I would want my results to actually last, so undergoing these looksmaxxing procedures and protocols are worth my time, and subsequently have a good ROI. By necessity, the core foundation of looksmaxxing is healthmaxxing. One could make the short-term argument for this, by saying that you need quality sleep to have white sclera, a lack of eyebags, and good skin. Or that avoiding sugar avoids acne. Yes, there are a lot of excellent examples of healthmaxxing being great for looksmaxxing in the short-term. But culturally, we must put an end to this emphasis on short-term results. It does far more harm than good.

In my day-to-day life, I observe wealthy older people, with sparkling white teeth and hair, good muscular tone, and a quick wit, who tell me they don't feel 85, and that they forget their age. It's genuinely a beautiful phenomenon, and not something you'll see among the decaying, general American population, whose slabs of fat droop off their skeletons in real time. When I think about my end goals, I think about how I want to be a jacked grandma, with white hair down to the floor and sparkling white teeth, telling my grand kids about my based opinions and all the cool things I've done :). It would be absolutely glorious.

Being hot for a moment at the age of 20, but being botched shortly afterwards, aging and acting strangely due to drugs, or incurring controversy from creating yet another single mother in this world is NOT glorious. Clavicular's trashy behavior that comes from a lack of focus on longevity, is exactly what drives away any high quality, non-primitive female, which I know is what he truly wants. And he's never going to get it if he keeps following the "advice" from the... males at the Fresh and Fit podcast, who are low IQ scrotes in their mid-30s, unmarried, who have done nothing in the past 10 years but have sex with Miami whores and make a podcast about it. Don't take advice from people you don't want to be like.

Newsflash: You can't sleep around endlessly in your 20s and expect a self-respecting, quality woman to settle down with and marry you. The studies that show women's pair bonding ability breaking down as she continues to sleep around, show extremely similar results for men. You could definitely argue that this effect is stronger for women, and I'd agree, but the point remains the same. Any good woman would run far, far away from Clavicular the moment he opens his mouth to speak. Clavicular is destroying not only his looks long-term, but his chances at fulfillment and long-term happiness by optimizing for the short-term, as seen by how he is currently suiting himself to be attractive to dumb whores only, and is using short-term optimized looksmaxxing protocol drug stacks. For fuck's sake, the dude takes meth on a regular basis, and a variety of other stimulants, along with steroids, various peptides, anti-anxiety medication, and possibly opiates. No high IQ female would touch that mess with a 20 foot pole.

5) MOVING FORWARD

So, I'm not attracted to Clavicular because he cares too much about what other people think of him, he wastes his time with anti-quality people and activities, he lacks masculine frame, and the philosophical justification he gives for his looksmaxxing goal, along with the methodology, hold no real ground to stand on.

But what should Clavicular do from this point onward? He spent his entire, later half of his adolescence (from 14 onwards), obsessing with his appearance and not doing much else. He needs to start from that point of knowledge and reverse that effect. Currently, he is shallow, with less depth than a spoon. Seriously, he needs to log off and spend some time in nature, in the mountains or in the woods, finding himself. Self-reflection is required to become great, which I know is also what he truly wants. Every ambitious man like Clavicular wants to become great. But don't take it from me, take it from every great man of history. Finding yourself in nature, away from social media and drugs, is a verified way to undergo quality self-reflection. If he's unable to do that because his withdrawal symptoms would be terrible, he should go to rehab first.

He is going to eventually get off the drugs. Either he is forced to when his body can't take it any more, or by choice. I hope it's by choice.

Good luck, Braden Peters.